Digmy

This is a rather hastily put together issue of Digmy - or, to put it another way, three History essays have got the better of me. Anyway, now the bit you've all been waiting for...

Press:

Rome: " Where the hell is that bloody knife? "
" Have you seen it Luigi? "
" Yes indeed your Holiness, the Russian ambassador is certainly getting the point! "

France-Italy: Just a precaution, you understand.

Rome-Paris: Sorry.

Russia-Germany: I do not like being called a lying nit.

Rome-Moscow: In future if you wish to either test my reliability or fool me just say so. There is no need to send a letter, incorrectly addressed with your orders and a 9p stamp inside. Incidentally, if you want the stamp, I'm afraid you will only be able to obtain it second-hand from somewhere in Cornwall.

ANON: Who are you calling a lying nit, Styler? Perhaps if you told the odd lie you might win a game instead of moaning about being clobbered.

Rome-Con: If you cannot afford the ink I will send you a bottle of the Russian ambassadors blood.

Russia-England: Good game, good game, let's have a look at the old scoreboard. Russia 8, England 4.

Rome-London: I hope we can do business together.

As a point of interest, Ian, I received a letter from Norman containing a Russia-Italy communique - so perhaps it was a mistake.

Waiting list for P/2:

Ian Phillips, Philippe Truscott, Margaret Hacker, Phil Dyson, Keith Smith (?) and TWO OTHERS.

I'm printing ten extra copies of this issue and various unsuspecting people will be getting one in the very near future.

Another thing, I assume that unless you say directly that you don't want it printed, then anything you do write to me is liable to be splashed across the front pages of 'The Sun' and it's companions. You have been warned!

Coops, nearly forgot the deadline!

DEADLINE SATURDAY 28th JANUARY to Stephen Agar, 3 North Road, Chester-le-Street, Co.Durham. DH3 4AQ (Tel. Ch-le-St. 883309)
